Community Design Utilizing Tsunami Evacuation Map "Nigechizu"

Not Only Rely on The Development of Infrastructure, But Think about The Evacuation Methods

Since the Great Earthquake, awareness to prepare for disaster has grown. We cannot simply rely on huge structures to survive. The most important is to escape from danger, and prepare the ways to survive. The Evacuation Map is a method for the purpose.

What's The Evacuation Map "Nigechizu"?

The Map That Shows Evacuation Time by Color Made with Residents

"Nigechizu" shows how much time it takes from a point of road to the nearest evacuation point by color. By making "Nigechizu", participants can not only see the time to evacuate, but understand the risk of the community by making the map.

The time for evacuation is shown by the color.

By Coloring the roads, we can find the dangerous points intuitively.

"Konagani" Conference, to Discuss The Dream of Community Development

From December 2015 to February 2016, all four "Konagani" conference have been held at the Hirota. To take advantage of "Nigechizu" that was created in a workshop in 2014, we discussed "Outdoor Activity Center" relocation of plan in Hirota, and use the lowland where people no longer live after the tsunami. Also from the opinion that people should actually try walking the evacuation route on "Nigechizu", there are plans to the walking to verify "Nigechizu". "Nigechizu" has actually started to be used in the town planning.

"Konagani" have the meanings of "future" in their own words in Hirota.
